World.

ESTABLISHED BY JOSEPH PULITZER. Published Daily Except Sunday by the Press Publishing Company, Nos. 53 to 63 Park Row, New York. RALPH PULITZER, President, 63 Park Row, J. ANGUS SHAW, Treasurer, 63 Park Row, JOSEPH PULITZER, Jr., Secretary, 63 Park Row.

VOLUME 56......NO. 20,005

BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE.

OME weeks ago The Evening World drew attention to the urgent need of summoning the park authorities and the best landscape experts in the country to co-operate with the engineers in planning one of the most important improvements the city has ever contemplated.

We refer to the proposed changes in Riverside Park which must follow the covering of the New York Central tracks along sections of Riverside Drive.

Public spirited citizens who look ahead are awake to the fact that this is more than an engineer's job. It must be treated with the care and foresight it deserves NOW before it is too late.

Two letters which follow are to the point: To the Editor of The Evening World:

Engineers tell us Riverside Park will be improved. But I need scarcely remind you that the original plans for Central Park were made by a body of citizens as distinguished as those who now make this improvement of Riverside Park. The Centrai Park plans were the work of engineers as competent as those now employed.

Yet after several years' work under these Central Park plans it was found necessary to change them fundamentally. The whole park had to be completely re-designed.

Prospect Park in Brooklyn was planned by a commission of distinguished citizens, again under engineering guidance, and again it was found necessary to change fundamentally these plans under direction of competent landscape architects.

Changes now proposed in Riverside Park have the support of the Port and Terminals Committee, but the Park Commissioner's name nowhere appears on the plans. He is custodian of the parks, important changes are proposed, but we know nothing of his opinion as to the result of these changes. This method is contrary to all sound doctrine of park management.

It does not necessarily follow that any opinion park authorities might give would be finally controlling, but to ignore or suppress the opinion of those placed in charge of such priceless property is to act in defiance of the dictates of intelli-W. B. VAN INGEN.

Mr. Van Ingen is a well known New York artist who combines civic alertness with a level head.

Samuel Parsons, for fifteen years Superintendent of Parks, an authority on park planning and maintenance, writes:

To the Editor of The Evening World: The insuperable objection to the present plan for improving Riverside Park is the filling up of valleys it involves. The character of a park lies in its valleys as much as its hills. It is the rolling contour which makes the chief beauty of Riverside Park. The valleys must go if the present plans are carried out. No scheme of grading ever can give the public the present beau-

Why not sink the tracks far enough to save this surface? It will be cheaper in the end and is the only sensible way. SAMUEL PARSONS.

The whole matter calls for further expert examination and advice before any contracts are signed.

Nor is the most economical way the one that costs least now. If engineers are allowed to go shead on the "build a good tunnel and sod it over" plan, within a few years New Yorkers will be frowning at a miserable disappointment and facing the expenditure of millions she had been reading. "Say." bile into a post."

The private secretary laughed. Then she said: "You're so funny, Mr. of dellars more to correct errors that need never have been made.

"What was it?" asked Miss Primm, pleasantly. "Why, I almost turned my automostic into a post."

The private secretary laughed. Then she said: "You're so funny, Mr. Snooks."

What was it?" asked Miss Primm, pleasantly. "Why, I almost turned my automost into a post."

The private secretary laughed. Then she said: "You're so funny, Mr. Snooks."

Mrs. Jarr, who had kissed

The Riverside water front, with its varied background of banks on much about? What kind of traps rising toward the city, is an extraordinarily fine one. It would be the ing to trap?" pride of any European city-studied, improved regardless of cost- Miss Primm, private secretary built into an enduring asset of municipal convenience and sightliness. the boss, just had to smile. "My good-

Unless New York has foresight and patience to treat the present plan as a park project no less than as an engineering feat the result plan as a park project no less than as an engineering feat the result for their work, but the city declares for their work, but the city declares it was done for charity and won't think of him."

"Oh, I don't expect was silence for a moment and then Bobbie murmured: "I shall tell the Jarr. "You are crazy, like all the rest one who does it exactly what I of the men, about baseball. You'll be standing watching the bulletin standing watching watching the bulletin standing watching the bulletin standing watching w

The President believes this nation should stand ready to belp enforce peace-which is a very different thing from trying to butt in with it.

Twelve good men and true can still find a cold-blooded murderer guilty without phrases. "Moral imbeciles" and "sick souls" haven't yet turned trial by jury into a psychological

Hits From Sharp Wits

When an applicant for a position is charm of narration is the story of the told that he will be borne in mind if rich man who spends a week gathanything turns up, he would better ering data showing how a man can continue to try to turn something up live on $5 a week.—Nashville Banner.

Women throw old shoes at a bride with the hope of hitting the groom.

Too many men have the mistaken notion that the thing to do is the other fellow.—Toledo Blade.

When the wife cautions hubby to bring home a bottle of "hat bleach" these days he knows instinctively that his last summer "kelly" is to see active service again.—Macon News.

There's a different

First "Barberless Barber Shop."

A Chicago burber claims to have

One of the things that is losing its bany Journal.

Letters From the People

High School Cadets.

To the Editor of The Evening World.

I wish to take exception to the statement that the students of Stuy vesant High School were the first in the country to form a company of cadets.

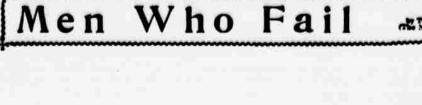

The high schools of the City of Boston have for years maintained several regiments of cadets, and they were, and still are trained to a high tender of the cannot be found to the cannot London, 4.522,964; Manhattan, 2,- were, and still are, trained to a high degree of efficiency in military tac-tics, both regimental and company, by officers of high rank in the M. V. 103,208; Greater New York City, 5,253,885. In the Edstor of The Evening World M. and receive military diplomas. For the past several years military drill has been part of the school cur-riculum. It would seem that New Will you kindly state through the columns of The Evening World the "There seems to be a movement on population of London, England, and also New York and Greater New York

"Slipper one anyway," came from "There seems to be a movement on foot bere to tease somebody," said also New York and Greater New York riculum. It would seem that New York is just waking up to a need of preparedness among its school stu-dents that existed in Boston over twenty years ago. J. C. H.

W. L. WANDS. Buffalo. To the Editor of The Evening World: To decide a bet, please state through Letters from the People which is the second city in New York in point of population. JOHN B. O'BRIEN.

"I threw up my last job because I couldn't get along with the boss."

The Office Force

- By Bide Dudley -

Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening World.)
TILLIE, the blond stenog-, "What was it?" asked Miss Primm, are they using and what are they try continued the boss. "Miss Primm, why are you like a duckling?"

"I'll have to give it up," replied the private secretary, beaming on him.

pay."
"Oh, I see." replied the blonds.
"That's why the Mayor is provoked." "Absolutely. His argument is per-fectly sound."

"Sure it's sound." said Bobble, the derstand yer attertude," said the boy. but Mrs. Rangle says she "Oh, golly!" chuckled Miss Tillie, care as it keeps him out of it sound, and"—

"Pardon me, Bobbie, but you're inof the room, closing the door with a terrupting," said Miss Primm sterniy. "And, more than that, what you have to say is of no consequence whatever "You people make me smile," said Popple, the shipping clerk. "Miss Primm has that wire-tapping thing al wrong. She has made it just about a wrong. She has made it just about as clear as —

"Mud," said Bobbie.

"Silence!" snapped Miss Primm at the boy. Then she turned to Popple.

"Will you kindly tell me wherein I'm wrong?" she baked, deflantly.

"Sure," replied Popple. "It was a charitable institution."

"Oh, I see," said Bobble.
"Ahem!" said Spooner, the book-keeper. "I'm inclined to think we'd better change the subject. I see shoes are going up. What do you think of

"Evidently you've been to some bur-lesque show," said Popple. "That's where they have girls who kick." "I have not been to any burlesque show and I don't care for your jest," said Spooner. "I mean shoes are go-ing up in price."
"Huh!" said Bobble. "Guess we'll all have to wear boots."
"That was a silly remark." said

all have to wear boots."
"That was a silly remark," said
Miss Primm. "If shoes are higher naturally boots are."
"Oh, sure," replied Bobbie. "Boots

"Oh, sure, replied Bobble. "Boots often come clear up to the knees, while shoes seldom"—
"Well, I never!" chirped Miss Tillie. "That's the brightest remark I've heard in a long time. If I weren't timid I'd give Miss Primm a joke about the slipper."
"Slipper one anyway." came from "Slipper one anyway," came from

"And I suppose I'm the goat, to use a slang expression," snapped Miss Primm. "Well, it's got to be stopped. I'll have nobody springing cheap wit-ticisms at my expense. I shall tell the next one who does it exactly what I think of him."
"Quiet now—be calm!" said Spooner.

A Chicago burber claims to have stablished the first barberless barber population.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

Agriculture.

To the Editor of The Evening World.

Which industry includes the more people in this country, agriculture or manufacturing?

Agriculture.

I think of him.

"Quiet now—be calm!" said Spooner.

"Here comes the boss."

Mr. Snooks entered the room wearing a smile. "Good morning, folks." he said. "I almost did a wonderful trick just now."

- By Roy L. McCardell-

16 DIDN'T you forget something?" asked Mr. Jarr.

goodby, and asked him for money could think of nothing remise in the whole duty of a wife, and so looked shopping, but I am not. It just tires boards. That man Rangle never gets home till 11 and 12 o'clock every night, being at the baseball games, care, as it keeps him out of the sa-

"Do you mean you don't expect me home early or you don't want me?" The wise man expects everything from himself, the fool looks

Reflections of A Bachelor Girl By Helen Rowland

Miss Primm turned on him like a tigress. "You shut up, you little fool!"

"I get yer meaning, but I don't unto others .- RICHTER.

Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening World.) O a woman the first kiss is a sacrament; to a man it is-just a

This is the time of year when a bachelor goes about with a "To Let" sign over his heart, and any fluffy little thing he happens to meet can loaded down with overdressed women walk right in and take up her summer quarters.

After a woman has had two or three husbands it is always a puzzle her whether her friends are pitying her for not being able to stay married or envying her for being able to go right on getting married.

A man's first love is the most superlative thing in the world; after that they are merely comparative.

Just as a man takes a morning "nip" to cure the headache left by the night before, a girl sometimes rushes into a new flirtation to forget the heartache left by the one before.

The quickest way to shatter the home is by hurling home truths at

When a man breaks his promise to a woman he can always soothe his mothers running to town and running conscience by making her another "just as good."

Competition is the life of love; marriage the monopoly that kills it.

The Jarr Family

By J. H. Cassel

"It appears to me that every day is their favorite day," replied Mrs. Jarr. "whether they live in town or in the suburbs. Take Mrs. Jenkins, for instance. I'm sure she gets to the stores oftener than I do, and she tells me that the suburban trains are crowded with women all the time. They come to town after their husbands leave home and they are back before them. Talk about living in the city! Well, those women that complain because they live in the suburbs get to matiness and bargain sales oftener than women that live in town!"

money. They are matinee crazy, and, what with their bridge whist clubs at home and their running to town every day and every day, it's no wonder they can't keep servants, and their poor children are neglected and run wild."

"I thought people moved to those suburban towns solely on account of their children, so they could have fresh air and plenty of playroom," remarked Mr. Jarr.

"Well, they have plenty of fresh air and plenty of playroom," replied Mrs. Jarr, "for they have nobody to look after them or know what they are doing, poor little things, with their to town day after day!"

"Living in the country can't be had, after all, then," said Mr. Jarr. "Let us move out."

"No, thank you." said Mrs. Jarr. live far enough away from the theatres and stores up here, as it is!"

The Stories Of Stories

lots of Immortal Fiction Masterpieces

By Albert Payson Terhune

THE BOTTLE IMP; by Robert Louis Stevenson. EAWE, the Hawaiian sailor, bought the bottle from an unhappy rich man in San Francisco.

It was no common bottle, this opal-hued flask, for its glass had been tempered in the flames of the infernal regions, and Satan himself had placed an imp of mischief inside it. Whosoever should own this devilish bottle could ask for what he would and receive the thing he asked for. But if he still possessed the bottle at the time of his death his soul would be forever lost. Nor could be sell it, except for minted money and for less than he had paid for it. All this the sad millionaire told Keawe. Also that the price had grown, less and less throughout the centuries, until now it could be bought for $50. Keawe paid the $50; then wished for the money back again. Instantly, every penny of it was in his pocket. He returned to Hawaii, and there he wished for a beautiful, great house on a hillside overlooking the sea. And the house was his. Having now all the wealth he needed, or wanted—and fearing to die with the bottle in his possession—he sold the flask to a shipmate of his

for a few cents less than he paid for it. on after that he met and wooed Kokua, a girl to whom his heart went out at first sight of her. She loved him as dearly as he loved her.

And they were betrothed. No man in all Hawaii was happier than Keawe. He loved and was loved. And he had won wealth without losing his soul.

Then, one night, as he bathed, he saw a rough patch on his skin. And he knew he had fallen victim to leprosy. Goodby now to his happiness and his love! The vision of Kokua's loveliness arose before his tortured mind. And he cried aloud:

"I will venture my soul to win you! He set forth to find his shipmate and to buy back the bottle that he night wish himself well again.

But his shipmate had sold the bottle, and so had the man to whom the shipmate had sold it. And so on until Keawe at last traced it to its latest owner—a young man who had bought it for 2 cents. That meant Keawe must buy it for one cent, or not at all. And—how could he sell it again for less? Yet, for love of Kokua he paid his cent, took the bottle and wished himself clean of his leprosy. And at once he was cured. He married Kokua; but ever the thought of his soul's damnation marred the joy of his life with her. And at last he could no longer keep his secret grief to himself, but told his wife all. Kokua was cleverer than he, and she saw a way of escape. They went to the French Island of Papeete, where the centime is a minted coin worth only one-fifth of a cent.

There Kokua secretly persuaded a dying beggar to buy the bottle from Keawe for four centimes, and took an oath to buy it back from the beggar for three. She kept her oath. Keawe was gloriously happy-until he discovered by chance that it was Kokua who, through love of him, had bought the bottle and thus had risked damnation. Keawe did not tell her that he had learned her scoret. He sought out scoundrelly drunken sailor and, giving him three centimes, bribed him to go to Kokua and buy the bottle from her. Keawe promised to buy it back from him for two. The sailor bought the bottle from Kokua, but realizing its value, he craftily Bargain. Frefused to sell it again to Keawe.

"I tell you," warned Keawe, a wild hope springing up in him, "the man who has that bottle goes to hell!"

"I reckon I'm going, anyway," hiccoughed the sailor, staggering away, "and this bottle's the best thing to go with I've struck yet. Good night to you!"

Keawe rushed back to his wife, his heart aglow with the bliss of their escape. And home they went together to a life of wonderful happiness is their great house on the Hawaiian hillside,

A man that studieth revenge keepeth his own wounds green, which otherwise would heal and do well.-BACON.

Just a Wife--(Her Diary)

Edited by Janet Trevor. Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Brening World.)

CHAPTER XIX.

myself till after gix o'clock. Of course you men think a woman is silly about shopping, but I am not. It just tires me all cut! But I promised to meet my mother downtown and so shopping with her."

"I suppose Monday is the favorite shopping day for all women?" asked Mr. Jarr.

"It appears to me that every day is their favorite day," replied Mrs. Jarr, "whether they live in town or in the suburbs. Take Mrs. Jenkins, for instance. I'm sure she gets to the general stance. I'm sure she gets to the favorite stores oftener than I do, and she tells me that the suburban trains are local many account of the stores of the suburban trains are never seemed so desirable. But I bit marriage a lot of us were glad to never seemed so desirable. But I bit marriage a lot of us were glad to never seemed so desirable. But I bit marriage a lot of us were glad to have a practice from which as the was Mrs. Winthrop and Ms delicately minded woman instinctive. It is glicately minded woman instinctive. Wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So when olgarettes were served wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded woman instinctive. So wife for HIM," was the answer is delicately minded to heir for HIM." So c erns.

Suddenly I heard voices on the suffering and sleep!
ther side of the fern-bower. And the first distinctly uttered sentes

Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening Work.)

Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening Work.)

Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening Work.)

A UGUST 11 (continued).—I suppose it's not morally wrong for women to smoke. I know be wife of Dr. Houghton's?" The voice belonged to a pretty, red-haired and mothers do it nowadays. But the Jarr, "but I'm going downtown to do custom seems to me like putting on that she was Mrs. Winthrop and Me word of the information that she was Mrs. Winthrop and Me me that the suburban trains are crowded with women all the time. They come to town after their husbands leave home and they are back before them. Talk about living in the city! Well, those women that complain because they live in the suburban sales oftener than women that live in town!"

"Commuters don't have much pleasure going to the theatre," said Mr. Jarr. "They haven't time to dine after the play; they often haven't time to stay till the last act is finished."

"Huh!" eniffed Mrs. Jarr. "Those women that live in the suburban towns don't deny themselves anything in the way of play-going. They come in to the matinees. You should see in to the midday trains! They are just loaded down with overdressed women coming in to spend their husbands' money. They are matinee crazy, and, money. They are matinee crazy, and, while apartment had and ever teemed so desirable a test I bit live in the suburban towns don't deap themselves anything in the way of play-going. They come in to the matinees. You should see the midday trains! They are just loaded down with overdressed women coming in to spend their husbands' money. They are matinee crazy, and, where the complex is a spend their husbands' money. They are matinee crazy, and, where the come of my little apartment had live list and tried to make my eyes as hard and the would back my lips to hide their trembling and tried to make my eyes as hard and the would that he house of his bit and tried to make my eyes as hard and the would the house of his bit at the two of them. It would for the house of his friends at house of his friends and tried to make my eyes as hard and the the two of them, but the file to make my ever in the usual tried to make my eyes as hard and the the in the two of them, but to mater in would fried to make my ever my that the late the house of his friends at have to make my round my file to make my round my file to make my round my file to make my round my f

Facts Not Worth Knowing By Arthur Baer

oright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening World), In order to lessen the monotony of the journey, a Detroit manufacturer building a revolving door with a graphophone attachment.

It is the consensus of opinion among scientists that there is no lost otion when a hobo starts after the free lunch. You have no redress if your new Oxfords blister your heels, as Thomas lefferson overlooked that entirely in the Constitution.

A collapsible hat, to expand and contract with the wearer's head, is the latest for college graduates.

A Connecticut manufacturer has bequeathed the income from his pool hole manufactory to sustain a one-armed lunchroom for left-handes pe